

ABSTRACT

An electrical coil, particularly a shim coil for use in magnetic resonance imaging spectroscopy, is would so that there are a plurality of layers with each 5 layer having a plurality of turns. Insulating material is disposed between the turns of each layer. This reduces the capacitance between the turns and has the effect of increasing the self resonant frequency of the coil.